In order to provide you with the best service available, the Lancaster Small Animal Hospital has instituted this Avian Wellness Program for your favorite feathered friend.

Birds make wonderful pets and are beautiful additions to any family. However, their anatomy and physiology make them unique in many ways. The average bird does not display signs of illness until very late in the course of their disease. Prior to their domestication this was necessary to avoid being singled out as prey by other animals. Unfortunately, this also makes their medical and surgical care a special challenge.

For this reason, it is important to have your pet examined by a veterinarian AT LEAST once a year. Additionally, because illness is often masked in these species, routine laboratory tests are highly recommended on an annual basis. Routine screening provides especially useful information when first obtaining your bird from a breeder or pet store.
